How long has your business been a UFAS Participant?

For over 20 years and were the first aquafeed production facility to join.

Why is your business a UFAS Participant?

Feed safety is critical to our mission of supporting sustainable, responsible, and high-quality aquaculture. UFAS ensures our processes and procedures are robust enough to protect our aquafeed from safety risks and maintain supply chain integrity. It has also been essential for regulatory compliance and gives customers confidence that the feed they buy is safe, helping us stay at the forefront of responsible aquaculture.

How does being a UFAS Participant add value to your business?

The scheme strengthens our feed safety, customer trust, and supports responsible aquaculture.

It ensures we have robust traceability systems and procedures in place, tested annually through a recall exercise that builds team confidence and cohesion.

Participation in the scheme reinforces our compliance, secures continuity of supply, and underpins our strong market position.

How does your business find the audit process?

Audits drive continuous improvement in feed safety.

We run internal audits to stay ready, even for short-notice inspections. Auditors offer fresh insights, shaping our practices. We also conduct risk-based checks, making audits a valued, team-building part of our proactive compliance culture.

What are the opportunities and challenges for the future of UK feed assurance?

As feed assurance grows in complexity, pressures around sustainability, ethics, and innovation increase. Advances in ingredients, nutrition, and digital tools offer new opportunities.

UFAS must remain clear and focused, ensuring feed safety while supporting responsible aquaculture in a changing industry landscape.
